Specialization: How FPC Helps You Hire the Right Talent for Your Business

Your consultant understands your business because he or she specializes in your particular industry or the discipline for which you're searching. In fact, most of our consultants have years of career experience within the industry for which they now recruit. This industry expertise and our established relationships expand the opportunities to locate the right people for open positions and can accelerate the entire process.

FPC consultants placed over $75 million in salary into the workforce in 2011.

About FPC

Since 1959, FPC has been helping businesses find and keep their most valuable asset — talented people. Today, with more than 60 offices and over 150 recruiters, FPC continues to lead the industry and uphold the principles of professionalism and integrity on which it was established.

When you contract with FPC to fill your executive, professional or middle management positions, you benefit from a national network of recruitment specialists. These professionals—including your personal consultant—have access to the combined thinking, experience and relationships of our entire office network, in a wide range of industries and disciplines, across the country and around the globe.

We built FPC with our clients' interests at heart—to provide nationwide impact and yet be personal, flexible and responsive. Integrity, dependability and results have earned FPC the respect of America's leading corporations, and we continue to set standards for the field we helped pioneer. That is why we measure our own success by the number of clients who repeatedly return to us to fill their staffing needs.

FPC Recruitment Process

Our recruiters are rigorously trained professionals with specialized industry experience who serve as consultants throughout the hiring process. We know that you have many pressing priorities other than interviewing, and we make it our responsibility to seek out the best available candidates and make hiring them as easy as possible.

From your initial needs analysis to the final negotiations and on-boarding, your FPC consultant is right there with the resources you need to help you make the right decisions and the right hire.
